The match table contains likelihood ratio (LR) DNA match statistics between items. A numerical entry gives the LR logarithm, or log(LR), the number of zeros after the 1. For example, a LR of a million is written as 6, since 1,000,000 has 6 zeros after the 1. When items are tested multiple times, the most informative LR results are shown. A blank entry indicates no statistical support for a match between the compared items. Should an item not match any other item, we omit that item from the match table. These preliminary unconfirmed results should not be used for civil or criminal justice purposes.
